The two tables are:
Development Issues - Table for tracking the progress of development Improvements - Table for tracking the progress of various improvements

(e.g. a web banner, email marketing, etc.) I have a page that lists the Development Issues; this list can change from day-to-day, and I need to keep track of the progress in each issue. I'm currently doing this by adding the issue number to the URL, then looping through each issue in a function for a page using php. Here is a simplified version of what I have so far: Function that pulls the issues:

function get_issues($var) { $sql = "SELECT * FROM issues"; $statement = mysql_query($sql); while($row = mysql_fetch_assoc($statement)) { $issues.= $row['issue']; } return $issues; }

The url for an issue listing: The html: "> I have also tried storing the issue ID in a separate database table, but the issue is the same - I can't just pass an issue number to the function;

A German nurse has died from the coronavirus, according to local media reports, bringing the total number of fatalities to three. The unnamed woman tested positive for the disease when she visited the Klinikum am Friedrichshain hospital in Berlin a week ago, the Berliner Kurier newspaper reported. She was not among the group of four patients, who all had mild symptoms, the paper said. Two other patients were transferred to a different hospital because their condition deteriorated. "We deeply regret the death of a nurse who was doing her duty for her patients in a difficult time," a hospital spokesperson said. A total of 325 people are currently infected in Germany, according to official statistics. More than 1,500 people have been quarantined in Germany, and the country's second-largest city of Düsseldorf announced on Wednesday that it would allow the reopening of bars and restaurants. As of last week, nearly 13,000 people have been diagnosed with Covid-19 in the UK, killing more than 80 people. The government imposed a lockdown earlier this month.Q:

.htaccess redirect to.php via index.html I have a domain with both an index.html and an index.php.

However, both serve the same content. When I get the page via index.html, it works as I expect. When I get the page via index.php, it displays the page content and adds the php file as a tag to the HTML. How can I make it so the page is loaded via index.php and not index.html. This is what I have

in my.htaccess file: RewriteEngine On RewriteCond %{REQUEST_FILENAME}!-f
RewriteCond %{REQUEST_FILENAME}!-d
RewriteRule ^(.*)/index.html$ index.php?src=$1
